Fall Term 2020

On behalf of the University of Saskatchewan (USask), we hope both you and your students are doing well as we approach the end of a school year that was anything but ordinary.

At USask, we are looking forward to continuing to welcome new students in a remote teaching and learning environment, and offering both long-standing and new supports to facilitate students' transition to university.

While final decisions are still being made, most students should plan for instruction that is entirely remote. Colleges/schools are communicating with students directly about plans for the fall term, and we can confirm that all first-year courses in direct-entry colleges (Agriculture and Bioresources, Arts and Science, Education, Edwards School of Business, Engineering and Kinesiology), as well as programming at the USask Language Centre, will be offered entirely remotely.

Please read through and consider sharing the updates below with your students, and refer those planning to attend USask this fall to our New Students page, students.usask.ca/new, for need-to-know information for the incoming class of 2020.

If you have any questions, please contact us at admissions@usask.ca or (+1) 306-966-5788.

Admissions update

Many programs at USask are still accepting applications. These are the deadlines to apply to begin studies in Fall 2020.

- Agriculture and Bioresources is July 1
- Edwards School of Business is July 1
- Engineering is July 1
- Arts and Science is July 1 for international applicants and August 15 for Canadian citizens and permanent residents

Since first-year class registration opens on June 13, students are encouraged to apply earlier when possible.
